

The Selkie

Selkies are mythical creatures said to be half human and half seal. When in the water, they appear as seals but when they come on to the land, they shed their seal skin and take on the form of beautiful dark eyed humans.

It is said that Selkies like to dance and sing on the beach under the light of a full moon. Their enchanting voices are irresistible to any human that hears their song and there are many tales of people that have fallen in love with a Selkie.

Fishermen have great respect for seals, knowing it could be a Selkie they've encountered. They know that these mysterious shape shifters speak the secret language of the sea: They understand when the waves whisper 'a storm is coming' or where to find the best fish.

If you are lucky, you might spot a Selkie in the water yourself.
